WHY THIS MATTERS

Search has fundamentally changed.

For fifteen years, "getting found" meant ranking on Google. That era is closing. Buyers increasingly ask ChatGPT, Gemini, and Google's AI Overviews — and receive a single answer, not ten links.

If your brand is not present within that answer, it is effectively invisible — regardless of how strong your conventional SEO may be. This emerging discipline is known as AEO/GEO (Answer & Generative Engine Optimization), and most organizations have yet to address it.

This assessment is a structured, twenty-point self-audit across the five factors that determine whether AI engines surface your brand — or overlook it.

How to use this assessment

Work through each section and mark every statement you can affirm with confidence. On completion, total your marks out of twenty and consult the score interpretation. The result indicates where your brand currently stands and where the priority gaps lie.

Visibility & consistency

1

Findability

Does your brand appear in AI answers today?

- ☐ Ask ChatGPT "best [your category] in [your market]" — your brand appears.
- ☐ Google's AI Overviews mention you for your core service queries.
- ☐ Perplexity or Gemini reference your site when asked about your offering.
- ☐ You appear in the "best of" listicles that AI engines tend to draw from.

2

Consistency

Is your information uniform and machine-readable?

- ☐ Your name, services, and value proposition read identically across your website, LinkedIn, and Google Business Profile.
- ☐ Your core claims — what you do, who you serve — are worded the same everywhere.
- ☐ Directory and listing details match your website exactly.
- ☐ No outdated or conflicting descriptions of your brand remain on the web.

Credibility & content

3

Credibility

Do credible third parties corroborate you?

- ☐ Your brand is mentioned on at least one trusted third-party site (press, partner, or industry publication).
- ☐ You hold genuine, recent reviews on platforms that AI engines reference.
- ☐ Others describe what you do in their own words online — not only your own copy.
- ☐ Your founder or brand maintains a consistent presence that substantiates your expertise.

4

Content

Is your content structured to be cited?

- ☐ Your key pages answer a specific question directly within the first two lines.
- ☐ Your content includes specifics — figures, examples, data — rather than vague claims.
- ☐ You maintain pages addressing real buyer questions ("how", "best", "vs", "for...").
- ☐ Your content is original and offers insight a model cannot source elsewhere.

Technical readiness

5

Technical

Is your site readable by machines?

- ☐ Your site implements structured data / schema (Organization, FAQ, Service).
- ☐ Your most important answers reside in crawlable text, not within images.
- ☐ Headings are framed as the questions your audience actually asks.
- ☐ Content is formatted for extraction — concise paragraphs, lists, and clear sections.

INTERPRETING YOUR SCORE

Total your marks out of 20

16–20AI-Ready

Your brand is positioned ahead of most. Focus on compounding the advantage.

11–15Half-Visible

The foundation exists, but gaps are quietly costing you citations.

6–10At Risk

AI engines are largely overlooking your brand. The gaps warrant prompt action.

0–5Invisible

Competitors are being surfaced; your brand is not — yet.

THE NEXT STEP

Know precisely where your brand stands.

Diginfo conducts full AEO/GEO audits for organizations serious about being found and cited by AI. We map every gap in your visibility and deliver the plan to close it — across SEO, performance marketing, and AI search.
